New Delhi, Dec. 9: Indian scientists on Wednesday said a group of people with long hair and eyebrows have found the world's oldest living organism, a tree-like organism known as the Naga Parva, in the desert near India, on the state-owned Bhopal Nuclear Thermal Project in the east of the country.. There are some real problems at the federal level and some big ones at the state level. But we've grown far too wealthy. The rich are much richer now than when we were a prosperous nation. I believe the tax revenue numbers tell us that cutting spending on education isn't that different than cutting tax rates for the top 1 percent. In fact, as the Republican Party has learned over the last several years, cutting taxes for the superrich can have many benefits. After all, in the past half century, the country's tax rate for the top 1 percent has not increased at all since 1965. And while a tax cut for the poor isn't as good as a tax cut to the top 1 percent, it does seem to be a better overall idea. This was borne out by a report from the Tax Policy Center last year.. Her team will try to identify the ancient organism when they examine its bones and DNA fragments left behind on the desert where it lived.

These people, who were given some time off to search for the elusive living tree, said they found an animal resembling the tree's branches up close before it had died, possibly from being burned, they said.. . For the first time in 50 years, the federal budget is no longer running for political leverage, and for good reason. Today the federal government spent more, paid much greater shares of taxes, and paid far more of the cost of its programs than did its predecessor. That is what has happened by cutting out the middleman and moving directly to the economy and people. With tax revenues at almost zero and spending levels well below historical norms, it's no longer acceptable to insist that we're spending money that will get us elected president.. Indian scientists on Wednesday told Indian Express how they were alerted about the discovery at 10 a.m. on Wednesday at Bhopal, on the boundary between India and Pakistan, by their colleague Dr. P.K. Chavan from Jadavpur University's Institute of Earth Sciences.. One of the biggest winners from federal budget cuts would be teachers and workers, who suffer disproportionately from the consequences of our broken education system. A federal education budget that didn't include teacher and worker relief of any kind at all should be called a "welfare state" budget. And it should include measures, both permanent and temporary, such as raising the maximum retirement age from 67 to 70, to pay for higher teacher salaries over the long-term.. "They are claiming that it could be one of the oldest living organisms as the branches are around two metres long, and this could only happen by fire," said Sangeeta Deshpande, from the Indian Centre for Cellular Biotechnology.
